Overview

The 25hours Hotel Langstrasse is located on Europaallee, at one of the nodal points in the current urban development project, where the new district runs into the legendary Langstrasse. It is a place where worlds and ideally cultures blend and merge. An intersection between Zurich of the working folks, the ordinary people, and the city inhabited by bankers and entrepreneurs. All of it a stone's throw from Central Station. It's a colossal construction project on the grounds of the former freight yard.

The prestigious firm of Zurich architects E2A won from the tender to design Construction Zone H. The building by the architects working for the brothers Piet and Wim Eckert is stocky, a solitary structure towering high above its surroundings. Its location at the juncture between Langstrasse, the traditional district of subcultures and revellers, and the more distinguished setting of Europaallee, inspired the hotel makers to channel the contrasts between banking deals and red light shenanigans, between art and avarice. The team around designer Werner Aisslinger created a holistic look under the working title "pocket universe". Fittingly, the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse sees itself as a miniature cosmos, providing bright new services for a new breed of urban nomads.

Even the lobby area is immediately recognisable as a pocket universe. Reception resembles one of the pawn shops that are dotted along Langstrasse. It is the go-to place for all wishes, questions, or just a friendly hello. Guests can marvel at all kinds of objects or on certain days even 'pawn' themselves for a night in the hotel.

As one would expect of a typical 25hours, the ground floor is more of a feisty living room than a traditional hotel lobby. It's where guests mingle with locals, inquisitive visitors and residents of the new district. There's plenty for them to discover as well. The main design themes are 'arrival' and 'departure'. They are playfully interpreted to the left of reception in a FREITAG tree of bags, made of travel bags and steel. It was created in cooperation with the Zurich bag label FREITAG. The idea: Regular guests are given one of the legendary bags made from recycled lorry tarpaulin to leave at the hotel. They can use it to store personal items like running shoes, which will then be waiting the next time they check in. The bags are pulled high up on the steel frame and then locked. Until the guest picks them up or returns.

Next to that there is the 25hours things shop, curated in collaboration with the Zurich-based Kein & Aber publishing house. It stocks all kinds of unusual books, magazines, and coveted items. From useful to beautiful – everyday items for hotel guests and selected products by 25hours affiliates.

Guests and visitors can expect a laid-back, fireside atmosphere in the living room opposite the bar. An informal co-working space during the day with plenty of seats and free high-speed WiFi, it's a great spot to meet or to get things done. At the heart of the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse is the restaurant NENI – and not just in a culinary sense. It's where our guests gather for an Oriental lunch or dinner. Cinchona Bar is the perfect place to socialise and meet friendly people. Here, the philosophy of 'day drinking' is cultivated at the counter and in the cosy lounge section, celebrating the consumption of sophisticated highballs even in the afternoon. The French culture of apéro is strictly observed at Cinchona Bar.

Art is the central theme at 25hours Hotel Langstrasse. Inspired by a traditional Japanese shunga motif, Tobias Rehberger, one of the most influential artists of his generation, designed an entire wall with his 'Porno Tiles'. It is a spectacular head-turner at the bar and separates the counter from the 'living room' section. The works by VELI & AMOS present a delightful contrast. The wild group of young Zurich artists lived up to their billing yet again by filling several sections with their exciting street art.

The vibrant art scene in the immediate neighbourhood inspired “Artist in residence”. Esther Eppstein, grande dame of Zurich art, was recruited for the concept. She will curate the project to provide artists from a broad variety of stylistic schools with space to work in a specially created studio on the ground floor of the hotel. They will be given free room and board in return for attending discussions, art openings or letting guests peer over their shoulders as they work. “The idea is taken from places like the Chelsea Hotel in New York or the Colombe D’Or in St Paul de Vence,” explains 25hours founder Christoph Hoffmann. “Establishments that invite artists to reside on their premises. Our dream is to become a hotel with its own cultural history inside of a decade.” What’s more, Esther Eppstein will develop a cultural program for the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse.

From art to business: the 25hours offers its hotel guests space to meet and work on the first floor. The business station is equipped with iMacs and printers. The audio tape lounge was designed together with Supersense, the Viennese specialist for analogue culture. Guests to the Audio Tape Lounge can kick back and enjoy vinyl tunes, while analogue gear like “Polaroid Pinball” or the “Arm Wrestling Machine” create an authentic arcade feeling. A classic hotel bar adds to the ambience. This area is also bookable for private functions. The additional meeting room (free area) for up to 60 people hosts conferences and events.

In total, 170 rooms in five categories await guests from the first to the seventh floor. They are comfortable sanctuaries with design elements inspired by different themes from the red light district, the Belle Époque or big city life. Furnished to the standards that urban nomads appreciate at 25hours: exquisitely comfy beds for carefree sleep, air conditioning, sustainable cosmetics, flat-screen TV, a minibar, Kreafunk Bluetooth Speaker and free high-speed WiFi. The rooms designed in the red light theme are situated on the first, second and third floor; the Bel Étage is on the fourth and fifth floor, and the Penthouse theme is on the last two floors.

The corridors on the individual levels have eye-catchingly, extravagantly colourful carpeting with geometric patterns. Natural materials and warm hues set the tone in the rooms. Wood is the dominant feature of the floors and furnishings, combined with screed and ceilings made of exposed concrete. The photo wallpaper adheres strictly to the three worlds of inspiration. Designed using motifs by the Zurich photographer Nadja Stäubli, the wallpaper extends across the entire wall facing the bed.

The bathroom is the highlight in all rooms. “It’s the bathrooms that really set a hotel room apart,” explains designer Werner Aisslinger, “because frequently they have that element of surprise you just won’t get at home.” And jaws certainly drop in the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse: a fully glazed, 1.40 x 1.40 m shower stands proud at the centre of each room.

So what does each category offer? Medium starts at a size of around 18 square metres. The Large category is slightly more spacious, offering around 25 square metres. Extra Large has even more space, coming in at around 35 square metres. For longer or special stays, the Plaza Suite offers plenty of space on approximately 44 square metres, and the Trainspotting Suites, also on approximately 44 square metres and with their own terrace, provide a big city feeling with a view of the mountains.

The crowning glory on the seventh floor is the spa area with gym facilities. Guests in the trainspotting sauna enjoy a spectacular view of the tracks, with trains trundling in and out of Zurich Central Station. Exciting vistas are guaranteed. There is an inviting rest zone to relax and an outside area with sunbeds.

25hours is home of Schindelhauer. Bicycles are available for use on shorter journeys in cooperation with the Berlin-based boutique bike maker.

NENI Zürich

What could be better than authentic world cuisine in a hotel for cosmopolitan individualists? The NENI restaurant serves eclectic, eastern Mediterranean dishes that do far more than fill tummies and satisfy cravings.

NENI – these four letters are a name as well as a pledge. The NENI on Naschmarkt in Vienna is devoted to the finest culinary pleasures and the nucleus of an out-of-this-world cooking experience. It was created by the Molcho family. Haya Molcho is a passionate host, chef, catering entrepreneur, restaurateur to the scene, cookery book author, wife of the legendary mime Samy Molcho and mother of four. She developed the concept for NENI together with her sons Nuriel, Elior and Ilan. The family now runs three establishments in Vienna. But her cooking philosophy extends far beyond the borders of Austria. Helped by 25hours, NENI has already conquered Berlin in 2014, Hamburg in 2016, Munich in 2017, Cologne and Paris in 2018 and Copenhagen in 2022. “I see NENI as the most cosmopolitan soul food I have ever encountered,” says 25hours founder Christoph Hoffmann. The name NENI stands for the first letters in the names of the sons Nuriel, Elior, Nadiv and Ilan. Three of them work full-time at NENI, and Haya Molcho leaves no-one in doubt that the family business is close to their hearts. “I am all of this, and all of this is me,” says the entrepreneur, pointing to her own childhood in Tel Aviv. It was there that she learned how to cook and to appreciate mealtimes as a communal ritual. “My grandmother was a good cook. And even as a three-year-old I would stand there and help her,” she says with a smile. “Home is a culinary word for me. Cooking is to express longing for where you come from. It means warmth, sitting together and enjoying a full house, packed with guests.”

Cooking like in Israel: for the Molchos this also means collecting inspiration from all kinds of regional styles: from the Persian region and Russia, Arab countries and Morocco, Turkey and Romania, France, Spain, Germany and Austria. Chinese, Indian and Thai influences gradually permeated Haya’s cookery as well from the years she spent accompanying her husband on tour. Her approach is international: she cooks for the world, not for individual nations.

All of these experiences and styles blend into her very own, eclectic cuisine. “I call it nomadic cuisine,” says Christoph Hoffmann, adding: “Our restaurant concept creates a sensual tapestry.” And General Manager Lukas Meier appreciates in particular that the spirited nature of the Molcho family reflects the character of the house in Zurich so well: “The central live cooking bar will be an exciting place to gather – with surprising meetings and lively communication. The perfect embodiment of the NENI philosophy that eating is never lonely or serious, rather always passionate and sociable.” In this way, NENI cultivates the idea of communal eating, of sharing food and celebrating pleasure. Everyone is invited to sample the various dishes. As one would expect of a 25hours Hotel, the service is informal and personal – eating at NENI means becoming like one of the family.

And what’s on the menu? Entirely in keeping with the tradition of Oriental starters, guests are invited to try mezze, a hummus platter with tahina, Haya’s Famous Popcorn Falafel or an Open Flame Beef Sirloin Skewer with tomatoes, harissa, sesame, chilli and chives. When it comes to the main dishes, the Jerusalem Platter is a perennial favourite among guests, while the Sabich with baked eggplant, hummus and tomato salad is always a delight. Herbs such as coriander, mint, rosemary and thyme shape the courses in an exquisite blend with Oriental spices like ginger and jeera, saffron and cinnamon. The NENI Style Schnitzel with panko, capers, aioli, chimichurri and parmesan or the Butterfly Sea Bream with pumpkin and harissa filling provide variety. Desserts include the NENI Cheesecake with lime or the Sesame, a homemade Muscovado ice cream with date syrup and caramelised pecans.

The design by Studio Aisslinger exudes calm and reserve to lend NENI a perfect setting. Guests at the live cooking bar can literally peer into the pots of the chefs working in the open-range kitchen and observe them preparing the steaming delicacies in the Jospier grill oven. They also have a perfect view at the tables in the slightly elevated central # come as you are.

island. Whether it's a light lunch, a fortifying snack or a sumptuous dinner with dessert – the Molcho family blends a sense of home with a longing for faraway places, wrapping it up in delightfully extraordinary culinary experiences. “NENI combines the familiar with the new. NENI is multicultural, but never a cliché,” says Bruno Marti, Executive VP of Brand Marketing at 25hours: “That what makes NENI and 25hours such a perfect symbiosis.”

Cinchona Bar

At each of its locations, 25hours looks to create a focal point that attracts guests and locals alike. What better place than a bar? The Cinchona Bar at 25hours Hotel Langstrasse is the perfect spot to sup a coffee over work or to enjoy a sophisticated aperitif during the day. At night it morphs into a stage to meet, greet and relax. Voices, faces, chats, liveliness, laughter – and great drinks! It's a small but special, unusual venue with a laid-back style.

The creative mind behind the Cinchona Bar is the internationally acclaimed barkeeper from Hamburg, Jörg Meyer. "Together with Jörg Meyer, we managed to develop a smart bar concept that will truly be unique," says a visibly delighted 25hours founder Christoph Hoffmann, who respects the bartender as a known face around the restaurateur scene in Hamburg. The Cinchona Bar is keen to establish a new aperitif culture at the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse. "Day drinking" is the eyebrow-raising name that Jörg Meyer has given his concept, which he explains with a knowing wink: "I believe that homo urbanus has the right to be served alcohol in a distinguished setting anytime from lunch onwards. A human right. It's a question of style. And it needs to be encouraged."

Jörg Meyer has run the Bar Le Lion in Hamburg together with his brother-in-arms Rainer Wendt since November 2007. A winner of multiple awards, the bar belongs officially to the "Best 50 in the World". It was here, in 2008, that Meyer created his internationally renowned Gin Basil Smash, a cocktail made of gin, basil and lemon. The barman opened his second place, the Boilerman Bar in the district of Eppendorf, in 2012. The concept: easy-going with a fair hint of nonchalance instead of upmarket and pricey. A handsome neighbourhood bar where people can enjoy meticulously concocted highballs in a laid-back atmosphere. Later on, he adapted the idea for the 25hours Hotel Altes Hafenam in Hamburg. And now he's doing the same thing in Zurich, just differently. "This concept fits the 25hours like a glove," says 25hours Chief Development Officer Henning Weiss. "The people of Zurich will definitely take to our special service."

"Highballs have drifted off the radar a little," the bartender says, "and it's a frequently misunderstood category anyway. In a nutshell: they are small, uncomplicated drinks that combine top quality with great value for money. High balls are short drinks served in frozen glasses with two ice cubes; basically they are quick to prepare and just as fast to drink. It's a brilliant way to widen your experience. Here at Cinchona Bar, we mainly serve vermouths, americanos, quinquinas, sherry, madeira and port, called 'fortified wines' in English. These aromatic wines are the most important tools we use to mix the perfect daytime drink." And once they have sampled one, prepared with a shot of tonic, a hint of soda, some good ice cubes and a smidgen of citrus fruit, the residents of Zurich are bound to become fans of #DayDrinking, too. No doubt.

So what does the name Cinchona Bar mean? "A cinchona is a type of shrub or tree from South America; they give us the best ingredients for our light afternoon drinks," explains Jörg Meyer. "Bitter substances from the bark add a refined touch to the spiced wines from Italy, Spain, France and other parts of the world."

Interior & Stories

Hotels create their own microcosms. Guests from all over the world gather there when far from home. Paths cross, sometimes by accident, other times less so. People spend time in a foreign environment that still makes them feel entirely at home. They are spaces filled with life, affection, discussions and lovemaking. A hotel is a cocoon, a safe harbour, an encapsulated world for a few hours' respite – a pocket universe.

The idea of a pocket universe became the guiding theme behind the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse. The house sees itself as a miniature universe, a jocular reference to its lively location at the heart of District 4, which is itself a little world of its own. The direct proximity to Central Station, a hub for travellers from all over Europe, plays an important role in how the hotel sees itself. There's always something happening, with things and ideas coming together as if by accident. The mood depends on the time of day and the guests. Not to forget, Zurich has a naturally or artificially created special status as a pocket universe in Switzerland, as does Switzerland itself – rightly or wrongly – in Europe.

For the second Zurich property run by the hotel group, Werner Aisslinger joined with the 25hours team to create a multifaceted concept with the working title pocket universe. Inspired among others by an album title by Yello, the electropop duo from Zurich, the idea of a pocket universe became the guiding theme pervading the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse. The house sees itself as a miniature universe, a jocular reference to its lively location at the heart of District 4, Aisslinger and his team created a truly welcoming ambience thanks to special zones to kick back and relax next to unusual and spectacular art installations.

True to the motto "If you know one, you know none," the second property in Zurich adapts perfectly to its new location, as Aisslinger confirms: "Our project is not a UFO; it is woven into the fabric of the city. We want to encapsulate the collision of two worlds here at this site – with a touch of humour, of course. And to stage the hotel as its very own universe." Christoph Hoffmann explains: "It was crucial for us to design the hotel as attractively as possible to make it interesting not only for travellers, but also to local guests."

Here, Werner Aisslinger uses his personal experience of hotels as inspiration in the design process. "I like hotels," he explains. "More the old, box-like structures, because they somehow reflect their neighbourhoods. A bit laid-back, vintage style, and certainly not dolled-up." The creative entrepreneur has little interest in over-designed hotels. "I may take a look out of curiosity, but I won't enjoy them," he admits, adding bluntly: "People still making opulent hotels for the rich are already passé. Today's guests look behind the scenes will want to know where things come from and what their story is."

This is precisely what prompted the 25hours creators and the designer to incorporate nods and winks to the immediate neighbourhood in the hotel's concept. The Langstrasse subculture with its cool bars, artist studios and the red light district was more than a simple inspiration. It should be reflected in the hotel's overall look. 25hours and Werner Aisslinger see themselves as collectors of varied lifestyles, each of them born in a very particular location. "It is a pledge and a challenge," says Aisslinger, admitting: "I like the groundwork, the evolution. That's why it's such a good fit with 25hours: We are both driven by the creative process." All the same, Aisslinger is determined to emphasise that the work produced in his studio is not a one-man show. "I work with collages, and so collaborating with specialists from Zurich is part and parcel of the deal." The 25hours crew shares this approach; after all, each one of the group's hotels attaches significant importance to local ties.

Neon letters decorate the hotel's façade, which were developed in collaboration with Studio Aisslinger. Words such as "trainspotting", "hug" and "surprise" are allusions to the hotel's offer, story and experience and contribute to its identity. The fonts are intended to reflect the diverse 'Chrüsümüsi' (which translates to 'a mild chaos') of the hotel interior. Genuine neon has a long tradition on Langstrasse and has become an increasingly rare craft. The colours are based on the hotel's brand design.

come as you are.

Throughout the hotel there are items of furniture and accessories that are based on designs by Aisslinger, for instance the sofas in the lounge area, which were developed specifically for the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse in cooperation with DeSede. Guests at NENI take their seats on Aisslinger's Juli-Chair by Cappellini; the design classic was reissued in 1996 to mark its 20th anniversary. Eye-catchingly variegated carpeting from the Vorwerk Collection "Elements", which Werner Aisslinger designed in a variety of geometric forms, is laid out in the corridors of the individual floors. Aisslinger's recent Cone Light lamps by B.Lux illuminate the rooms. 25hours founder Christoph Hoffmann deeply appreciates Aisslinger's open manner. "However famous he is, simply being Werner Aisslinger is not enough for him," he says. "The focus is always on the artwork itself and on the team."

Architecture & History

The Europaallee is the youngest district of Zurich on the former tracks adjacent to Central Station; it is a city within the city, taller and broader than anything that Zurich has ever seen. And it is here that the newly created district and the legendary Langstrasse intersect.

District 4 in Zurich is a peculiar biotope in an otherwise so orderly city. If windows are smashed or working girls get into a fight, it's pretty likely to have happened on Langstrasse. Anyone looking for international street festivals, authentically cosmopolitan culinary experiences or old-time and new-fangled stores and outlets is bound to be delighted in the "Vieri". There's hardly another part of the city where the character of a hermetic little village is preserved so convincingly as in District 4. Together with its twin, District 5, it is a haven of art and culture. A place with a bit more panache than elsewhere in the banking city.

The prestigious firm of Zurich architects E2A won the tender to design construction zone H in 2010. The architects working for the brothers Piet and Wim Eckert designed a two-part complex with flats and office space, a cinema and a private school. Also, a lively street level with shops, bars and restaurants. The project is rounded off by the high-rise that is home to the 25hours Hotel Langstrasse – a sturdy structure rising above its surroundings as a solitary building. "From an urban development perspective, the building acts as a connecting link between Europaallee and Langstrasse," explains architect Alexander Struck, project manager in charge at the firm E2A.

There are 6,500 square metres of floor space, spread over seven floors and concealed behind the glass-fibre-reinforced concrete facade. Large frames made of powder-coated aluminium, each holding several windows, lend structure to the outsides. Sliding glass blinds, controlled automatically depending on sunlight levels or individually at the push of a button by guests in their rooms, provide protection against the sun. The immediate surroundings are mirrored in the reflective surfaces. The dark grey, almost black facade matches the colours of the Langstrasse, contrasting delightfully with the light grey of the adjacent residential building.

The ground floor is laid out as openly as possible. 6.5-metre sliding elements can be fully opened. "This creates a fluid transition between inside and outside," says Alexander Struck. "It's as if the square outside runs into the building." Guests on the upper floors command a sweeping view of Zürichberg and Käferberg, a rare pleasure in Zurich. The name 25hours Hotel stands proud in large, prominently visible letters on the roof of the building, facing the tracks, reinterpreting the historical signage on surrounding buildings.

"We are immensely proud that our establishment is located at this important point," says General Manager Lukas Meier. "We believe it is our duty to breathe life into this new neighbourhood."
